Der Yuhua-Stein („Regenblumenstein“) ist eine besondere Steinart, die man im Yangtze-Fluss in der chinesischen Region Nanjing findet.

Der Legende nach gehen die Yuhua-Steine auf den chinesischen Mönch Yunguang zurück, welcher während der Liang-Dynastie (502-557) lebte. Seine Reisen als Prediger führten ihn auch nach Nanjing, wo er drei Tage lang seine Lehren verbreitete, ohne zu essen oder zu trinken.

Bewegt durch diese Aufrichtigkeit verwandelten die Götter die Regentropfen in Tausende bunte Blumen, die sich zu ebenso farbfrohen Steinen verwandelten, als sie den Boden berührten.

So der Name „Regenblumen-Steine“.

Noch heute wird in der Region das Rainflower Stone Festival gefeiert.

Die bunt polierten Kunststücke der Natur sind bei Sammlern als Glücksbringer beliebt.

The Yuhua stone ("Rain Flower Stone") is a special type of stone found in the Yangtze River in Nanjing region of China.

According to legend, the Yuhua stones go back to the Chinese monk Yunguang, who lived during the Liang Dynasty (502-557).

His travels as a preacher also took him to Nanjing, where he spread his teachings for three days without eating or drinking.

Moved by this sincerity, the gods transformed the raindrops into thousands of colorful flowers, which turned into equally colorful stones as they hit the ground.

Hence the name "Rain Flower Stones".

The Rainflower Stone Festival is still celebrated in the region today.

Nature's colorfully polished art pieces are popular with collectors as lucky charms.
